About the Jewish Museum London

At the Jewish Museum we play a vital role in telling the story of Jewish life, history and culture in Britain and in challenging prejudice, provoking questions and encouraging understanding.

Our mission is to surprise, delight and engage all people, irrespective of background or faith, in the history, identity and culture of Jews in Britain. Our vision is of a world where cultural diversity and the contribution of minority communities are explored, valued and celebrated, for the enrichment of society as a whole.

Our vibrant and stimulating exhibitions are central to the museum experience, These include hugely successful retrospectives on Abram Games, Judith Kerr, and Amy Winehouse. Amy Winehouse: A Family Portrait broke all previous visitor records, was covered extensively by media worldwide and has broken box office records whilst touring to Vienna, Israel, Amsterdam and San Francisco. Exhibitions on ceramics, the cultural history of blood, and men fashion have garnered critical praise and received 5 star reviews.

Our internationally renowned collections of Judaica and social history preserve and tell the story of Jewish life in Britain from the 11th century to today. They incorporate ritual and ceremonial objects, costumes and textiles, photography and oral history, documents relating to social and political life, prints and drawings and ephemera.

Our public programming enables us to break down barriers and reach new audiences through late openings, performances, talks, and walks. Highlights include You Know I'm No Good: Young Women's Empowerment Festival which featured Laura Bates, Susie Orbach and Otegha Uwagba. Recent visiting speakers have included Judith Kerr, Michael Rosen, Nikesh Shukla and Sir Simon Schama. We have recently been shortlisted for Family Friendly Museum of the Year.

Our award-winning learning programme reaches 20,000 school children each year, 95% of whom are not Jewish, helping to foster an understanding of Jewish culture they otherwise wouldn't have.

With the museum's rising profile, improving visitor numbers and expanding digital reach, we will be joining the Arts Council England's National Portfolio of funded organisations from 2018. This is an exciting time to join the museum as our reputation continues to grow and our ambitious plans for the future begin to take shape.
